RAMIE AND ITS FUTURE. Pedestrians on F street, Washington, have been interested for some days past in a unique exhibit in a show win. dow of "ramie" and goods made from the fiber of that plant. Little is known of ramie in this country, but it is beginning to be extensively used by manufacturers of cloth, and there is a decidfacturers of cloth, and there is a decided tendency among certain classes of capitalists to establish a purely American industry through the encouragement of the growing of the ramie plant by farmers, and its preparation into threads of cloth. Mr. S. H. Slaught, of California, who is in Wasnington, has been urged by certain interests to erect a ramie factory at Alexandria, to be operated in connection with a college operated in connection with a college where a general education in this industry could be given and apprentices trained thoroughly in the manufacture of ramie. He is decidedly enthusiastic on the subject of the development of the ramie industry and predicts that when the wonderful qualities of the fiber and the ease of its growth are thoroughly understood it will in a large measure displace vast importations of silk and wool, and should make in-

Ramie is now grown extensively in China, Japan and India, Mexico, Ha-waii, Samoa, the West Indies and South America. In the United States it has also been cultivated in small quantities in the gulf States and California. The main supply comes now from China, where for many years it has been used either singly in the preparation of fabrics or as an adulteration of silk goods. The fiber is remarkably strong and susceptible of being woven into almost any quality of fabric, from the coarsest to the finest textures, the latter of which rivals silks in delicacy. It can also be dyed in any color. One great advantage claimed for the ramie plant is that it gives several crops a year of is that it gives several crops a year, of-ten producing as many as four, and being perennial, does not require re-root-ing for sometimes as long as twenty years. It is thus a most economical occupant of the soil, and Mr. Slaught con-tends that it can be profitably cultvated when once the farmers have come to know how to handle it, and when he methods for its preparation have One great disadvantage so far has been the difficulty in securing ways for cleaning and ungumming the fiber in such a way as to compete with the exceedingly cheap labor of China, where this process is all conducted by hand. The Chinaman produces only one or two pounds of fiber per day, worth, per-tunities here given, not only for a and the farmers supplying the stock regularly, ramie goods will be used by every class of people in this country. Meanwhile, he contends there must be a single or divided process of demon-
